

The Star-Treader: And Other Poems (Classic Reprint)

This Rome, that was the toil of many men,
The consummation of laborious years
Fulfilment scrown to visions of the dead,
And image of the wicle desire of kings
Is made my darkling dreams effulgency,
Fuel of vision, brief embodiment
Of wandering will, and wastage of the strong
Fierce ecstasy of one tremendous hour,
When ages piled on ages were a flame
To all the years behind, and years to be.
Yet any sunset were as much as this,
Save for the music forced by hands of fire
From out the hard strait silences which bind
Dull Matter stongueless mouth a music pierced
With the tense voice of Life, more quick to cry
I ts agony and save that I believed
The radiance redder for the blood of men.
Destruction hastens and intensifies
The process that is Beauty, manifests
Ranges of form unknown before, and gives
Motion and voice and hue where otherwise
Bleak inexpressiveness had leveled all.(Typographical errors above are due to
